the old Quaker church property on Clay Workmen were engaged Street to the secoding wing of the morning in making some repairs to Street to the seceding wing of the Fifth Street Colored Baptist Church, but it became very evident that if the negroes are really working to secure the building for church purposes there will result a fight far more bitter than that started in the spring. Mr. W. C. Ricks, agent of the property, is out of the city, and representatives of the Property Holders' Protective League, which opposed the sale before, declared it altogether unlikely that he would transfer the church to colored people. They called to mind a former statement made by Mr. Ricks, in which he was quoted as saying that it was certainly not his desire to do anything offensive to the citizens of the neighborhood.

Will Resist Movement.

The Fifth Street Baptist has had all sorts of trouble here of late, and after a series of stormy and exciting events. Pastor Edwards was turned out by a vote of his congregation and a large part of the flock quit with him. Indeed, it is claimed that 270 members asked for their letters from the church, and just now they are looking around for a sultable place to hold services.
